WEDDING BELLS

HOLTSBAUM—JONASON

A quiet, but pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr and Mrs H. H. Croxton, Edmonton, on Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock, when Sadie Christine, daughter of Mrs Dora Jonason, was united in marriage to William Bennett Holtsbaum of Provost, Alberta. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Henry Wilson, rector of St Thomas' church Wainwright.

The bride was accompanied by her brother, who gave her in marriage, and her sister, Miss Margaret Jonason acted as bridesmaid. The bridegroom was attended by Mr Cecil Heller of Edmonton.

The happy couple left by motor for Banff where they will spend their honeymoon and on their return will make their home in Provost, where Mr. Holtsbaum, who is a member of the Alberta Provincial police, is stationed.

Both the bride and groom are well known in this district Mr Holtsbaum having previously been stationed at this point, while Mrs Holtsbaum was formerly on the school staff.

THE GOVERNMENT'S CONVERSION SCHEME FOR VICTORY BONDS

The attention of the holders of the five and a half per cent war loan bonds maturing December 1, 1922, is directed to the offer of the Minister of Finance to renew the loan on favorable terms. The last Canadian loan was placed in New York at a satisfactory price. The minister is making his present financial operation entirely a domestic one by offering to exchange the maturing bonds for new bonds bearing the same rate of interest, running for either five years or ten years as the bondholder may prefer. A further inducement to the investor is that he receives a bonus of one month's interest. The terms offered are decidedly favorable to the investor and it is probable that a large part of the maturing loan will be renewed. Arrangements for the exchange of the bonds can be made at any branch of the chartered banks. Holders who do not wish to reinvest will be paid in cash on the 1st December.

Mrs H. Chesney, of Leduc, has been a guest of Mrs O. Michon for the past two weeks.

EDGERTON EXHIBITION WAS WELL SUPPORTED; MANY GOOD EXHIBITS

(Crowded out last week.)

The eleventh annual exhibition of Edgerton Agricultural Society was held on their grounds, south of town, Tuesday, August 1st, and in spite of backward conditions, was a real success, although we would have liked to have seen better filled vegetable benches. This was the only weak link and yet the entires were full or merit. Several strong classes came forward in the horse section and the departmental judge, W. A. McKinnon seemed quite able to handle the various classes and not a complaint was heard.

Cattle classes were not as well filled as the horse classes, but when one considers the fact that for the last few days the thermometer has hovered around 90, one wonders that the cattle man was able to get his stock there at all

The same, of course, holds good of the sheep and swine sections, only the popular breeds were in evidence, but quality was very good.

The following is a list of the awards in the different classes:—

The bride was tastefully attired in a dress of white silk, while her sister, Miss Pearl Davis attended as maid of honor The duties of best man were ably performed by Mr Axel L. Malmberg of Heath.

Every good wish goes with them from their many friends.

I.O.D.E. HOLD ANNUAL MEMORIAM SERVICE AT ELITE

The annual "in memoriam" service in memory of all these who fell in the late war, was held on Sunday afternoon last in the Elite theatre under the auspices of the local chapter of the I.O.D. E.

Unfortunately the attendance was very poor which may be attributed to the fact that many of our citizens are holidaying, as well as to the inclemency of the weather during the day.

However, although the attendance was so bad, we would hesitate before we take it as an indication that we are forgetting our boys who fought and died for us.

Mayor Lally took the chair and opened the service with a few appropriate remarks, after which Rev. S. Davies read a suitable portion of scripture.

The Rev. H. Wilson gave an eloquent and touching address suitable to the occasion, and the audience joined heartily in the singing of such hymns as "Forever with the Lord" and "There is no night in Heaven."

During the service Mrs E. L. Fuller sang very sweetly and with true sympathy "Face to face". Mrs N. S. Kenny efficiently acted as accompanist.

At the close of the gathering many beautiful "memoriam" wreaths were presented and later taken to the cemetery and placed upon the I.O.D.E. memorial plot there.

CARD OF THANKS

The officers and members of the Whiter Musson chapter I. O. D. E. take this opportunity to extend their thanks to all those who contributed to the success of the annual memorial service held on Sunday last.

HEAVY PENALTIES FOR OPERATORS OF "LUCKY" WHEELS

Amendments have been adopted to certain sections and paragraphs in the criminal code of Canada whereby all games of chance and skill are banned, with the penalty for offences under this heading amounting to a maximum of two years' imprisonment, and a maximum fine of $2000.00.

These amendments entirely eliminate as being lawful such games as playing the wheel of fortune for kew-pie dolls, blankets or silverware, and even include cigars, etc. Not only does the amendment affect the person running the game but also those assisting in its operation. Whether or not the slot machine now getting much hard usage in cigar stores all over the province comes under this heading will likely be decided in the near future.

The wording of the amendment is as follows:

"Sub-section 1,-236, Criminal Code of Canada, amended by inserting the following paragraph: Everyone is guilty of indictable offence and liable to two years' imprisonment and to a fine not exceeding $2,000.00, who disposes of any goods, wares or merchandise by any game, mode of chance or mixed game of chance and skill.

"E—or induces any person to stake or hazard any money or other valuable property or thing on a result of any dice game, shel game, punchboard, coin table, or any other game of chance, or mixed game of chance and skill, or on the operation of any wheel of fortune."

The new ruling will have considerable effect on such booths as are now operating with exposition shows, and also governs the use of games of chance at church bazaars.

CAMP CONFLAGRATION QUICKLY SUBDUED.

TRAVEL TO THE NATIONAL PARKS

The total number of visitors to the Canadian National Parks during the past season was approximately 160,000, about 60,000 of whom came from outside countries. It is estimated that this travel represents approximately $18,000,000 foreign money brought into the country for which Canada sent out practically nothing in return. The total expenditures on the National Parks during the past 25 years have been a little over $6,000,000 or about one-third the value of the foreign travel they attracted last year.

Miss Denny is away to Clear lake for a short vacation.

The Fearless Lovers

ARTHUR APPLIN

Published by Special Arrangement with Ward, Lock & Co., Limited, London and Melbourne.

On reaching London, Athelbar drove to his club, bathed and breakfasted, then caught the first boat-train from Victoria.

"Perhaps they're on board," the duke said. "I don't want them to discover us until we're on the boat. Directly we arrive at Folkestone see that a state-room's reserved for me and leave me to deal with Mr. Lion.

"You won't do anything rash, your grace?" Andover said anxiously.

But the duke did not reply. It was a foolish question, for English history would not have been complete without the rash deeds of the Mullabys.

When the boat reached Boulogne the Duke of Athelbar and his confidential secretary were the first to cross the gangway and the last to enter the train. His daughter and Edward Lion were not on board, but the chef de gare handed him a wireless. It was from his confidential enquiry agent in London, to whom he had telephoned before leaving Stirling.

Edward Lion had married Lady Daphne that morning at a Registry Office in the Strand; they had driven straight to Victoria and taken tickets to Paris.

Andover was fearful of the effect this news would have on the duke, but he appeared to take it quite calmly. He made an excellent luncheon on the train, and only unfolded his plans when they were alone in his rooms at the Ritz Hotel in Paris.

Athelbar argued that there were at the most but half a dozen hotels to which Lion would take his bride. He was almost certain to have engaged rooms in advance. He told Andover to get into a cab, drive round to these hotels and make enquiries.

"The fellow probably expects to enjoy my daughter's income, so possibly he'll make a splash and not consider expense."

Acting on this hint, Andover first of all interviewed the manager of their hotel. The latter turned up the day's bookings. A telegram had just come signed "Redwing," engaging rooms for Mr. and Lady Daphne Lion, who would arrive about seven-thirty that evening.

The duke chuckled when he heard the news. Andover asked him what he proposed to do.

"As soon as Lion arrives kick him out. By the way, you'd better get on to the British Embassy; may as well be prepared in case the fellow shows fight."

Andover reminded the duke they were in a foreign country and that it would not be easy to keep a scandal out of the newspapers. He had a better plan which he proceeded to unfold. He suggested that the duke should write a letter to Lion, giving him an opportunity of relinquishing all claim to his daughter's hand, and reminding him she was under age. If he did this and left Paris immediately the duke would see that he was suitably recompensed. And Andover mentioned a very large sum of money.

"You haven't had any sleep, have you?" the duke said quietly. "I never heard such a ridiculous and disgusting suggestion in my life."

"Let me finish, your grace," Andover said quietly. "You'll tell him if he doesn't accept those terms you'll cut your daughter off without a penny. I'll make a copy of that letter. Now as soon as they arrive I'll place the letter in the bureau for Mr. Lion and I'll find some means of inducing him to leave the hotel for a few minutes. On his way out one of the servants will hand him that letter. He won't return."

The duke looked thoughtfully at his secretary. "Why won't he return?"

Andover glanced at his watch. "Well, your grace, you have sufficient influence at the Embassy, and the Embassy will have sufficient influence with the chief of police to find out a man who will, on some small provocation, pick a quarrel with Mr. Lion. He's the type of young Englishman who would be quick to take offence in a foreign country. He's almost sure to say something, still more likely to do something, that will give a watchful gendarme sufficient excuse to arrest him. Once arrested—well, the French police, as you know, are remarkably slow at making enquiries."

The duke rubbed his chin thoughtfully. "It sounds involved. I don't like the interference of the police. I would far rather break his neck myself."

"I don't think Mr. Lion's neck is very easily broken, sir."

It was a tactless remark, but Athelbar let it pass. "But what's the object of the letter, anyway?"

"To allay Lady Daphne's suspicions. When her husband doesn't return you will frankly explain what you've done. You'll show her the copy of the letter—you might even go so far as to say you were testing him to see whether his love for her was real or not. If it was genuine, of course you'd give them your blessing and——"

Andover shrugged his shoulders and smiled smugly.

"Scandal and gossip will be avoided, and long before the police release Mr. Lion you will have taken Lady Daphne home—or perhaps you might start on the proposed Mediterranean trip earlier than you intended, your grace."

The duke a little unwillingly admitted that Andover's scheme was a sound one. But as they had only three hours in which to put it into execution there was not a moment to be lost. Athelbar would drive round to the Embassy; Andover was to remain in the sitting-room in case the duke wanted him on the telephone.

"How did you register me?" he asked Andover.

"As Mr. Robert Aston. I'm your valet, John Smith."

"Good." The duke almost became genial. "Well, John Smith, you had better order dinner for half-past eight—no, say a quarter to nine. I shall be hungry. And you must get rid of Lion before we dine."

"Before he has an opportunity of dining?"

"Yes. It will be some small satisfaction to me to picture him spending his bridal night in a French prison with an empty stomach. I don't suppose he knows a word of the language either. That will make it worse for him. He's sure to put up a fight . . . I think we must arrange for three or four gendarmes; half a dozen, perhaps. With any luck Mr. Lion may spend a couple of years in Paris! We must see that the scrap doesn't occur outside the hotel though . . ."

Andover, you had a brain-wave."

"Thanks, your grace," Andover replied humbly.

But when at half-past seven the duke returned and told him the plans he had made he began to feel very ambitious. They were playing a dangerous game.

At a quarter past eight a messenger entered the duke's private sitting-room and informed him that Mr. and Lady Daphne Lion had just arrived. Athelbar handed him the letter.

"You know what to do? Make sure there's no slip. And see that I'm informed directly Mr. Lion leaves the hotel."

The messenger bowed.

Half an hour passed. To Andover it seemed like eternity. The duke was apparently quite unperturbed. He smoked a cigar and read La Vie Parisienne. At last there was a knock at the door. Andover jumped to his feet.

"Sit down," the duke said sternly. The messenger closed the door behind him before speaking. "Mr. Lion has just left the hotel. The letter was given him, but he put it into his pocket without opening it. I understand he's gone out to try and make some purchases in one of the smaller streets where the shops remain open until late. The number of Lady Daphne Lion's room is sixty-four."

The duke rose, threw down the newspaper and buttoned his coat. "Tell them to serve dinner in half an hour's time, Andover," he said.

CHAPTER XV.

For the first few minutes after Daphne's arrival at the Redwing's house in London she felt a sense of desolation. She realised her loneliness. She knew she had cut herself off, not only from her own family, but from her own life. Probably Mrs. Redwing sensed what she was feeling, and she soon removed all fears and doubts from Daphne's mind.

For Mrs. Redwing was before anything else a mother. Her husband died many years ago, and she had dedicated her life to her children. She had done more than that, for in a quiet, unobtrusive way she mothered all the lonely creatures she met in life, beasts and birds as well as humans.

As soon as she had seen the girl ensconced in her room with everything she could want she kissed her good night and joined her daughter downstairs. She broke the news to her that Lady Daphne had arrived without any luggage.

"She can't be married in breeches and boots, my dear, and she certainly can't travel in that get-up. I didn't like to worry her to-night, but I thought you might look out some things, though I'm sure your clothes won't fit her."

The next morning Daphne solved the problem of clothes by starting for the Registry Office an hour before the time, making a complete change of toilette at Berkeley Square. While she dressed, Miss Redwing, with the aid of an astonished housekeeper, packed.

"Throw anything into a suit-case," Daphne shouted to the willing workers from the adjoining room. Afterwards, when she was dressed, she altered her mind.

She wanted to be beautiful for her beloved. She turned out everything they had packed, she scattered her wardrobe about the room. She filled two suit-cases and an enormous hat-box. Mrs. Redwing waiting outside in a motor-car, grew anxious. At last, with the intention of hurrying the bride, she entered the house; but of course, when she found herself in Lady Daphne's room her sex betrayed her.

Clothes, clothes, clothes! How often, though in themselves they are a part of love, have they made a woman forget love?

Still, Lady Daphne was only a quarter of an hour late in reaching the Registry Office, Roddy, who had no idea of time, was unperturbed, but Edward had grown pale with anxiety.

When the ceremony was over they drove together to Victoria Station. Daphne tried to realise that she was really married, and failed. Mrs. Redwing, feeling like a dreadful conspirator, tried to make conversation, but it was obviously impossible to think of anything to say that was sensible. Roddy looked benevolently at the happy pair and smiled vacantly. Fortunately the usual turmoil attendant on the departure of a Continental train kept them all busy at Victoria and rapped them of their self-consciousness.

Just before the train drew out of the station Mrs. Redwing kissed Edward. Then she cried.

Roddy looked at her in astonishment. "It's a wedding we've celebrated, not a funeral!"

"I sometimes wonder if there's such a great difference between the two," she sobbed. "And oh, Roddy, supposing we've done wrong!"

"My dear mother," he replied, "don't be absurd. We've been making history. Wait and see."

He spoke prophetically.

The train was crowded, so was the boat. The lovers were not alone together for one moment. Daphne was grateful for the turmoil and the excitement. Years seemed to have passed since she had ridden out the previous morning to join her lover on Shanesey Bridge.

But the crowd irritated Edward. There were moments when Daphne seemed almost a stranger to him. He felt she was drifting away—as if he were losing hold on her. He told himself it would be quite all right when once they reached Paris and they were alone together, when he could take her in his arms, touch her, speak to her, hear her voice.

His wife. It was almost unbelievable. Once, when she drew off her gloves in the Boulogne-Paris train, he took her hand for a moment, heedless of the other passengers, and gazed at the band of gold round her left finger. Nothing could part them now, he told himself.

In the ramshackle taxi-cab that carried them from the railway station to the Ritz Hotel he put his arms around her and held her tightly. She gave a little sigh of content, but kept her face hidden and he was afraid to kiss her.

They were like two children standing hand in hand outside the gates of Fairyland, afraid to enter.

Strength

Strength of muscle does not indicate strength of nerves. On this account many people who look healthy enough suffer from nervous troubles and cannot understand what is ailing them. Sleeplessness and irritability are among the early symptoms. Indigestion and tired feelings soon follow.

Read this letter from an Ontario man:

Mr. W. L. Gregory, Charles St. E., Ingersoll, Ont., writes:

"I had been troubled for quite a while with indigestion. At times there would be a twisting of the nerves of my stomach; and I also found it difficult to get a good night's sleep. I am a moulder, and owing to the nature of my work my system became run-down. I took a treatment of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and found great benefit from this medicine. They did me a great deal of good. I have not been bothered at all with indigestion since, and can sleep much better. I have recommended Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to many of my friends, as I think it splendid for anyone run-down and needing a tonic."

Submarine Cables of the World Now Measure 325,000 Miles

Fifty years ago July 24, the Eastern Association Telegraph Companies laid their first submarine cable. At that time there were only 8,000 miles of cables in existence and only a limited portion of the earth was covered. To-day there are 325,000 miles of cable compassing every part of the habitable globe.

At this jubilee celebration of the Eastern Companies birth, the Duke of York, Prime Minister Lloyd George and other notables congratulated the corporation on its long and useful career and said it could claim a large share of the credit for bringing the countries and peoples of the earth closer together.

The WISHING FAIRY by Corinne

Do You Know a Sunfish When You See It?

THE Sunfish is a member of the Globefish family and Pimzie learned this after his wonderful play and rest among the rocks that had been uncovered by the low tide when he learned all about everything concerning Hermit Crabs. What a good time he had had! He hated the mere thought of leaving the place, and yet he had to, because at last the tide was coming in—which, as you know, it does every twelve hours just as it goes out again after the same lapse of time. So, tide coming in and Pimzie perforce going out, he naturaly was on the lookout for new things to learn about. He had watched Hermit Crabs until he really was tired, and that is unusual for any Brownie. He had seen them fight about nothing (which they are always more than anxious and willing to do), and he had seen them battle about the homes they lived in, had lived in or were waiting to live in. Such fights! He had seen some of them terribly wounded and torn in half, while the victors triumphantly took possession of the empty shell; and he had seen other things, too! And one of them reminded him of once when he had been on Fifth Avenue, in New York City, and when looking in a shop window had beheld a Japanese screen that had been so beautifully painted and landscaped that for a moment as he gazed at it he almost thought himself beyond the city limits and far away near the ocean. In any case, he watched himself leave, and thought of fields and birds and flowers and waters and fish and reeds.

Can you guess what he saw?

He was leaning against some rocks overlooking a patch of water which the sun directly struck, and right there, where he could so distinctly see them, a whole school of Sunfish were lazily basking and swimming in the sun-warmed waters. They went around and around, none of them hurrying, and one of them lagging behind the others; and Pimzie, who in spite of being full of mischief is just as full of love of the unusual and beautiful, could hardly breathe; he was far too busy looking! It was almost exactly like the design on the beautiful Japanese screen that he remembered.

When thinking of Sunfish we are very apt to make mistakes. We order Sunfish from the fish dealers when we should say Pandish. A real Sunfish is almost round in shape and has two long and pointed hand-like fins toward the end of its body. It gleams and shines with phosphorus by night, and for this reason is often called Headfish and Moonfish. It is not very good to eat, and the Panfish that we wrongfully call Sunfish are delicious and much in demand.

REMARKABLE LETTER

Canadian Woman Recommends Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Winnipeg, Manitoba.—"I can not speak too highly of what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I was a nervous wreck and I just had to force myself to do my work. Life was a misery and work was a burden. Even the sound of my own children playing made me feel as if I must scream if they did not get away from me. I could not even speak right to my husband. The doctor said that he could do nothing for me owing to my condition, but told me to expect another miscarriage. My husband's grandmother advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I started it right away and everyone noticed what a different woman I was in a short time. I went and engaged my doctor and he did not know me, I was so well. I was able to do my work once more and it was a pleasure, not a burden. Now I have a fine bouncing baby to use the doctor's own words. I am able to nurse her and enjoy doing my work. I can not help recommending such a medicine, and anyone seeing me before I took it and seeing me now can see what it does or me. What it has done for me it can do for anyone in the same condition. I am only too pleased for you to use my testimonial."—Mrs. Emily Davis, 721 McGee St., Winnipeg, Manitoba.

Timing Light

Arranging Experiments to Determine the Exact Rate at Which Light Travels

Experiments to determine the velocity of light to a degree of accuracy greater than has ever been attempted are being conducted at the Mount Wilson observatory where Dr. Albert A. Michelson, head of the department of physics, University of Chicago, has taken charge of the experiments in the transmission of light. The study is expected to go further along this line than ever before in the history of science.

The velocity of light as science now calculates, is 186,000 miles per second. Dr. Michelson hopes to reduce the speed to such accurate measurement that he will be able to determine the fraction of time it requires light to travel twenty-three miles from Mount Wilson to Mount Baldy, in the Angeles forest reserve. He plans to establish the measurements by experiments between these two stations.

What the Glass Contained

Counsel's perseverance is not always successful in eliciting the desired answer. "Was there anything in the glass?" asked the counsel of a somewhat reluctance witness. "Well, there was something in it," he replied. "Ah! I thought we should get at it in time," observed counsel. "Now, my good fellow, tell us what that 'something' was?" The good fellow took time to think over it; at last he drawled out: "It were a spoon!"

Constantinople's Pariah Dogs

Turks Sending Them to Barren Islands to Starve

Constantinople's hordes of pariah dogs have by no means been exterminated. Thousands of them, owner less and hungry, roam the streets and constitute a menace to pedestrians. More than 450 persons are now being treated in the Pasteur Institute here for bites from these vicious animals. A new campaign for their suppression has been inaugurated, but the Turks are proverbially humane and sympathetic to all animals and hesitate to put the dogs to death. Many of the beasts are being removed to the numerous barren islands in the Sea of Marmora, where they meet death by starvation.

"DR. FOWLER'S" Saved The Lives Of Four Children

Diarrhoea, dysentery, cholera, infantum and summer complaint are responsible for more deaths, especially among children, during the summer months than any other form of disease. According to statistics, in the City of Toronto alone, in the past five years out of 1,008 deaths of children, from diarrhoea, 757 died during the four summer months. It therefore behooves every mother to look after her children on the first sign of any looseness of the bowels by using Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, a remedy that has been on the market for the past 77 years, and has been proven to be the best there is.

Mrs. Harold Sellers, Pennfield, N.B., writes:—"Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry saved the lives of four of my children when all other remedies failed. It stopped the vomiting and terrible diarrhoea with which they were troubled. I will always recommend it, and may always have a bottle on hand in case of emergency."

The Mother of Athletics

England Taught World the Value of Outdoor Exercise

Much is talked and written by foolish people about the decadence of English sport when some foreign team or crew takes a laurel from us. It is nonsense. The English taught the world the value of outdoor exercise. Like all good teachers, they rejoice at the proficiency of their pupils. They do not expect to retain for ever and ever a jealous hegemony in athletics. Other experts, other methods must inevitably arise. The very presence of these foreigners is the highest possible tribute to the position held by England. Besides, it is easy to think too much of sport. There are other fields to conquer.—London Daily Express.

Honored His Orderly

The other day, along the Grand Boulevard of Paris passed a singular funeral cortege. Behind a humble hearse the procession (all on foot) consisted of a woman with five children, a mere handful of soldiers, mostly blacks, and a general of the French army in full-dress uniform. The general was General Mangin, and the deceased so singularly honored was the Soudanese who had been his orderly since 1914, and who, incidentally, had been cited in orders for extraordinary gallantry.—From the Independent, New York.

It Testifies for Itself.—Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil needs no testimonial of its power other than itself. Whoever tries it for coughs or colds, for cuts or contusions, for sprains or burns, for pains in the limbs or body, well know that the medicine proves itself and needs no guarantee. This shows why this Oil is in general use.

Another Thing

The benevolent man espied a little tot weeping, and said to her: "Now be a good little boy and stop crying."

The child replied, "I can't."

"Well, here's a penny. Tell me why you can't be a good boy?"

"'Cause I'm a girl."

Whose City

When the capital of Croesus was taken he asked the Persian conqueror if he knew what the troops were doing. "Sacking your city," was the answer. "Not at all," Croesus politely replied, "they are sacking your city," and the Persian quickly saw the point. The moral can be applied to Dublin, where all the damage done is done to an Irish city.—Springfield Republican.

Measuring Electricity

Method Is Same As Used In Measuring Water

The language of the electrician is Greek to most people. While he talks glibly of volts and amperes and watts, they know only that they have to pay an electric light bill for so many units, and let it go at that!

Though electricity is not a fluid, most of its terms can be compared with water flowing through a pipe. Turn a stream of water onto the paddles of a water-wheel, the work that the wheel will do depends upon two things—the amount of water delivered every second and the pressure of the stream. The first is measured in gallons and the second in pounds.

In the case of electricity, however, the rate at which it flows is measured in amperes and its pressure in volts. The work which it will do is found by multiplying amperes and volts together, which gives the answer in watts, or units of energy.

The unit is 1000 watts, often called a kilowatt, which is the electrical equivalent of one horsepower.

You will find the number of watts they require engraved on most electric lamps, and from this you can discover what they will cost to use. A 25-watt lamp will use one unit of 1000 watts in forty hours' burning.

The ohm is another electrical instrument which can be understood by a comparison with water. Water flows easily through a large pipe, but if the pipe is narrow, only a small quantity can force its way through. What the pipe is to water, the wire is to electricity. The smaller the wire, the more difficult electricity will find it to pass, because the fine wire resists its flow. Wires are measured by their resistance in ohms.

Durable Roman Roads

Portions Being Unearthed Compare Favorably With Modern Highway

In the third century the Roman rulers of England made a road which ran from Dover to London, and then northward to York and Newcastle, with branches leading to Chester and Carlisle.

They made is so well, laid its foundation so honestly, that a piece of it that has been uncovered in Hertfordshire is pronounced by the county and road surveyor to be as good as any highway today.

Give it an asphalt surface, he says, and it would compare favorably with the best of modern roads.

What a tribute to the work of those Roman road-makers! What an encouragement to all who are trying to do faithful, durable work in any direction!

Watling Street was used for centuries, then its surface began to be covered up by the dust of ages. It fell into disuse; it was covered by meadows; it disappeared even from local memory.

But wherever a piece of it is unearthed, as is happening now in Hertfordshire, there are the foundations firm and undisturbed by the centuries that have passed. Honest endeavor, putting the best of use into the day task, never loses its value.

Exchange in Europe

Humorous as well as remarkable are some of the stories of the fluctuating rates of exchange in European money.

An Englishman on his way from Germany to Switzerland bought a bottle of wine for 500 crowns in the Austrian Tyrol. After dring the wine he kept the bottle, and on crossing the Swiss border, sold it for fifty centimes. A Swiss fifty centime piece is worth 700 Austrian crowns, so that the Englishman not only got his wine for nothing, but made 200 crowns.

Snakes Overturn Auto

John Spelton, a traveling salesman, attempted to drive his roadster over two king snakes engaged in deadly combat in a road near Cape May, N.J., and had his car overturned into the ditch for his trouble. The reptiles, each measuring nearly seven feet in length, became entangled in the steering gear and forced the car off the road. Spelton was uninjured.

YOUR STARVED NERVES

The Cause of Neuralgia—Must be Treated Through the Blood

Neuralgia is the cry of the nerves for more and better blood. It means that the nerves are being starved. Like every other part of the body the nerves receive their nourishment through the blood. There is therefore no doubt that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will prove beneficial even in extreme cases of neuralgia. These pills increase and enrich the blood supply, carrying to the nerves the elements they need, thus driving away the sharp, torturing pains which nearly drive the sufferer wild. The benefit given by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in cases of this kind is shown by the case of Miss Carrie V. Fletcher, Ravenscliffe, Ont., who says:—"As the result of a severe wetting I got while out in a rain storm, I was attacked with neuralgia, from which I suffered greatly, and which kept me awake night after night. Although the pain diminished somewhat, I began to suffer in other ways. My appetite was poor; I got thin and had no energy. Indeed I was becoming a wreck of my former self. I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I am more than glad that I followed the advice, for they have restored me to my old-time strength. I cannot recommend the pills too highly and hope other persons in poor health will give them a fair trial."

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail postpaid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Asthma Can be Cured. Its suffering is as needless as it is terrible to endure. After its many years of relief of the most stubborn cases no sufferer can doubt the perfect effectiveness of Dr. J. D. When the Auto Loses

Collisions at railway crossings continue. Most of these conditions are the culminations of races between trains and autos ending in a tie. The train, however, always succeeds in knocking the auto off the tracks, for no one has ever heard of an auto knocking a train off the tracks. It may therefore appeal to some auto drivers' sense of logic that in all such cases a tie means that the auto loses. —Ottawa Citizen.

A Martial Obligation

"I must say those biscuits are fine!" exclaimed the young husband.

"However could you say those were fine biscuits?" whispered his mother as the fair bride went to get more from the kitchen.

"I didn't say they were fine, mother," replied the young man. "I merely said I must say so."

A representative of the Saskatchewan Co-operative Creameries has just returned from Europe after having made arrangements to export the bulk of the company's butter from Regina to Great Britain direct, and it is expected that between 25 and 30 carloads will leave Regina for the British Isles this year. Four cars are already on their way to the Atlantic coast.

Most Travelled Woman

Has Penetrated Portions of South Africa Unknown to Explorers

Mrs. Charlotte Cameron, of Edinburgh, is the most traveled woman of today, according to the Royal Geographical Society. She has just returned from a protracted sojourn in the South Sea Islands. In 1910 Mrs. Cameron covered 10,000 miles in South Africa. Later she continued her exploration of the dark continent, completely circumnavigating it and penetrating portions hitherto unknown even to explorers and scientists. During the war, when most of the world was closed to travel, Mrs. Cameron spent much time in Alaska. During the past three years she has been in South America, Australia and the South Seas.

Coin for League of Nations

The League of Nations recently struck off one coin (franc-or), which typifies the coin standard under which all league calculations will be based. It contains .3225805 of a gram of gold, 90 per cent. fine, and is worth 1925 of a dollar expressed in American currency.

The coin is octagonal, and carries the inscription "S.d.N.1921," which means "Societe des Nations." Only one coin will be minted, since it will be used merely as a standard and not for circulation.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON FOR AUGUST 13

ESTHER SAVES HER PEOPLE

I. Haman's Wicked Plot Against the Jews (3:1-4:3).

1. The occasion of (ch. 3). Mordecai refused to bow down to Haman whom the king had elevated to the place of prime minister and commanded that reverence should be shown him by all the princes and servants. In order to get rid of Mordecai Haman formulated a scheme and secured the king's endorsement to destroy all the Jews.

2. Fasting and mourning among the Jews (4:1-3). In their distress they sought the Lord. They did that which all those who believe in God had a right to do (Jas. 5:13).

II. Haman Checkmated (4:4-7:10).

1. Plot made known to Esther (vv. 4-8). Mordecai appeared before the king's gate clothed in sackcloth. This condition was reported to Esther by her maids and chamberlains. Upon his refusal to put away mourning Esther sent Hatach, her special attendant, to find out the cause of it.

2. Message to Esther (v. 8). This was in the form of a charge that she go unto the king and make request for her people.

3. Esther's hesitancy (vv. 9-12). This was on the ground of a certain law which made it a capital offense for anyone to come into the king's presence unbidden unless the king should extend clemency by holding out the golden scepter. The fact that Esther had not been called to come in for thirty days would seem that the queen was in disfavor.

4. Mordecai presses her obligation (vv. 14, 15). (13) Her own life was involved (v. 13). She might meet death if she went to the king unbidden, but most certainly she would meet death if she made no effort to avert the danger. Being in the king's house would not save her, for the decree had been made against the race of which she was a part. Her silence on this occasion would mean death. (2) She was not God's last resort (v. 14). He argues that deliverance would come from another source. God's work goes on and His purposes are fulfilled regardless of the decisions of men. (3) Reminds her that she had probably been raised up for this very work (v. 14). Every one has been born and prepared for some definite work. God's providence brings us into the particular circumstances where we can most definitely do His will.

5. Esther meets the call of duty (4:15-5:3). (1) Preparation by fasting (v. 16). She instructed Mordecai to gather together all the Jews in Shushan and fast for her for three days and nights. She with her maids presence of the king (5:1-3). Having did the same. (2) Went into the made the decision to do her duty regardless of consequences, after due preparation by fasting and prayer, she presented herself in royal apparel in the presence of the king. She decided that the best thing she could do was to lay her life on the altar. "If I perish, I perish," ought to be the watchword when face to face with duty. (3) King's promise to Esther (v. 3). He assured her that her desire would be granted even to the half of his kingdom.

6. Haman hanged (5:4-7:10). Esther was shrewd as well as courageous. She invited the king and his prime minister to a banquet. At this banquet she proposed another for the following day, at which time she promised to make known to the king her request. Haman went home jubilant, but that night something occurred which turned the tide. The king discovered that no reward had been granted Mordecai for having saved his life. Haman is compelled to exalt Mordecai, and at the second feast the queen revealed his wicked treachery and he is ordered hanged on the gallows which he had prepared for Moredcai.

III. The Jews Delivered (chs. 8, 9).

Haman was dead, but the decree against the Jews still stood. Esther pleaded that it be reversed. While it could not be reversed, through her influence another decree was sent out which in a large measure counteracted its first. The Jews every-where were granted the privilege to defend themselves and destroy their enemies.

Dog Receives Decoration

Saved Lives of Ninety-Two Persons in Steamship Wreck

A fine collar with cross attached has arrived at St. John, N.B., for "Hero," a Newfoundland dog, owned by Wm. Orm, of that city, in recognition of his saving ninety-two lives in the wreck of the steamship Ethie, on December 10, 1919, off the coast of Newfoundland. The dog swam through the big waves, taking a line from shore to the ship and by means of this a heavier line was put aboard and all saved.

The collar and cross are from the Starry Cross of Philadelphia. Mayor McLellan has exempted "Hero" from the local dog tax.

Great Reservoirs of India

For conserving her water supply there are to be found in India tremendous artificial lakes. At Dhcbar, in the Rajputana Province, for instance, there is a reservoir with a superficial area of 21 square miles; the masonry dam measuring over 300 yards in length and 32 yards in height. In Southern India, too, there are several reservoirs over 12 square miles in area.

Power of the Sun's Rays

The sun's radiant energy has been estimated as being equal to that which would be required to pump from the ocean enough water to supply a Niagara 75,000 miles wide. To equal the energy which the earth receives from the sun would call for a row of Niagaras encircling the earth three times, with every foot-pound of energy utilized in electric horsepower.

Shipment Sent to Britain to Undergo Extensive Tests

A car of the McMurray tar sands has been shipped to Swansea, Wales, this being the combination of 18 months of research by General Lindsay's chemists in London, Eng. A variety of tests have been made in England in addition to which processes for the extracting of oil from the bitumen have been studied in both France and Germany, and it is hoped that the experiments on the new carload will be successful and result in more extensive developments.

The Basis of Trade

If we take the countries of the world we shall find that with few exceptions they do not produce sufficient food for their own people, and it may be said quite plainly that if the general idea some people have, that they ought to do so, were the case, the world's commerce would suffer an appalling setback. It is their interchange of commodities which is the basis of trade.—Singapore Free Press.

"HEALTH WEEK" PLANNED FOR THIS PROVINCE

"A health week" for the residents of Alberta, to be held in the latter part of October or early in November, was the unanimous recommendation of the e of the Alberta Medical association, which convened in Calgary last week.

It was decided to ask the department of health, the university extension department, boards of trade, hospital associations, nurses' association and all local medical societies to co-operate.

In cities like Edmonton and Calgary it is the intention to hold meetings in three different districts at the same time, and to continue such meetings for three or four nights. These will be open to the public, no admission being charged or collection taken.

Considerable discussion arose over the subject to be dealt with, and these were outlined as follows:—preventive medicine, milk, venereal diseases, cancer and tuberculoisis.

In smaller cities there will be fewer meetings, one a week for five consecutive weeks.

THE LURE OF OF SOFT MONEY

It is curious to observe how the cycle of history turns, and how he lessons of yesterday are forgotten today. We think that the problems that face us now are quite different from any that our forefathers had to do with, and never consider that, although outwardly they may seem different yet basically they are exactly the same.

Such reflections arise in the mind when we hear of the demand for "soft money" that is now so prevalent in the western parts of the United States and Canada. It is the old, old story, that we have heard before, only a little changed, but really exactly the same as agitated the west before. It is greenbackism, populism, free-silverism all over again, and just as those agitators came and went, so will the present pass away in a few years, only to rise once more when the circumstances are favorable for a recrudescence of this particular economic heresy.

Let us consider for a moment why these movements arise. Greenbackism was a demand on the part of the agricultural interests in the United States to prevent the retirement of the greenbacks after the Civil War. We need not go into the whoe story, bue we may recall that after the war there followed a long and severe decline of prices in the United Sta-es which, as is usual and inevitable, hit the farmers worse than anybody else. Now the only way, according to the view of the farmer, to prevent the fall and raise of prices was to issue more greenbacks and oppose their retirement by the United States. Government. Of course the greenback party did not win, gained par and prices rose. As soon as prices rose greenbackism the depreciated grenbacks, once as low as 33 cents for the dollar, refaded away and the farmers forgot all about it.

But a few years later there came the next great decline in prices that culminated in 1896. Again the farmer was badly hit. especially in the far West. Vast numbers of men were struggling to get a foothold; they had mortgaged their holdings & were looking natural ly to paying off their mortgages out of the profits from their crops But every year they saw the prices of all farm produce steadily falling and to pay their debts became harder and harder. How were they to raise prices? This time it was not greenbacks but silver that was to do it, and we had the great free silver campaign, led by Mr Bryan, who declared that mankind should not be crucified upon a cross of gold. Well, Mr Bryan was defeated by the Eastern States, and the year of President McKinley's victory saw the upward turn of prices, and from 1896 onwards we heard no more of free silver and farmer forgot all about it.

And now we come to the great decline that started in 1920, and once more the cry for soft money is being raised. This time it is not free silverism but a mixture of greenbackism and what we may call for lack of a better word "Soft Creditism." The argument now is as follows: Prices have fallen disastrously and the only way to raise

(To be continued in next weeks issue.)

ALBERTA WILL SEND EXHIBIT ACROSS LINE

Following negotiations carried on by the publicity branch of the provincial government, it has been arranged to send an Alberta exhibit this year to several of the large fairs in the western States. The exhibit has been in preparation for a month or so, and George Hoadley, minister of agriculture, has authorized the placing of the exhibit on a circuit of the fairs which has been arranged.

The exhibit will be placed at the large fairs of South Dakota, and Iowa, including the interstate fair at Sioux City, Iowa, which covers four states, Iowa, Minnesota and Nebraska. The exhibit will also be sent to the state fair to Chicago, in which state irrigation colonists may be secured. In connection with this latter fair, the agricultural department will cooperate with the irrigation council and the officials of the Lethbridge Northern irrigation district.

Providing there is no alteration in the present plans, the exhibit will go to the States about September 1, and return about the end of that month. This is the first time that Alberta has placed an exhibit of this kind in the States for some years, save that which was taken to Chicago two years ago.

The exhibit as been prepared by Frank Peterson, who has done this work for te government for some years, and who has had 25 years' experience in the work. It will include not only a fine collection of grains and grasses from all points of Alberta, but will also carry other features. It is planned to show a series of motion pictures of the province with the exhibit.

The Short Work Day

Many things which are fine in theory, and in support of which seemingly incontrovertible arguments can be advanced, do not come up to expectations nor prove a success when the acid test of actual experience is applied. All right in theory, they are failures in practice.

Since the war, and in the topsy-turvy period which has been one of the aftermaths of the great struggle, quite a number of ideas over which people theorized have been given a trial. Russia has gone the limit in socialistic experiments, confiscating property, placing a ban on capital, and generally attempting to run the country on plans never before attempted, but which had for years been lauded and advocated by certain theorists. The world knows the result—Russia ruined, an outlaw among the nations, her people starving by the hundreds of thousands, her lands untilled to a great extent, and her great industries idle and useless.

In other countries, including Great Britain, United States, Canada and Germany, the experiment of greatly reducing the daily number of hours of work is being tried out with, as yet, no appreciable results of a beneficial character resulting to the workers, while the effect on industry and commerce generally, and on the living costs of all people has been disastrous.

Germany probably reveals the best example of the results of this experiment. Under the old autocratic form of monarchial Government, the workers of Germany had to work long hours. Following the revolution and the abdication of the Kaiser, a Workers' Government came into power. Hours of labor were greatly reduced, the old nine and ten-hour days being replaced by an enforced eight-hour day for all occupations, and to seven and six hours for certain arduous occupations. The experiment has not been a success, and, although Germany still has a Workers' Government, it is now proposed to add one or two hours to the workday. This policy is not only being forced on the workers; it is the labor leaders themselves who see the necessity for the longer workday.

The theory back of the much shortened workday is that the free time thus provided for the worker is to go into the family life, recreation, study—in short, to enable the workman and his family to cultivate qualities valuable to the family, society and the coming generation, to improve health and generally enable the worker to devote more attention to his home and self-improvement. Germany, however, is learning by experience that shortening of the workday below a certain figure develops into a problem of disposition of the free time.

It is pointed out by a writer in The Saturday Evening Post that when a twelve-hour workday is shortened to ten hours the disposition of the two hours does not constitute a problem, but when this free time is extended from two hours to four or even six hours a day a civic and economic problem arises. It has been found that this free time is devoted to a marked extent to one form or another of waste. The waste, it is pointed out, is often economic, in that the free time is devoted to trivialities that reduce the family income for necessities. In a word, the fact is that the free time has, with many, not been devoted to social, cultural, or economic ends, nor even to recreation, but has been worse than wasted, resulting not in an improvement of the condition and health of the worker, but in all round loss to him and his family.

German labor leaders are awakening to the fact that their old theory that with a shorter workday, the output per hour would be increased is not working out in actual practice; that the physical condition and morale of the worker has not improved; and that the only way to increase production and thereby enable Germany to pay her debts and rehabilitate her industries, is to increase the workday. They realize that the present salvation and future hope of Germany depend upon increased production, and that this can only be achieved by longer hours of labor.

Germany does not stand alone in the need for increased production. The whole world suffers from the same need, and particularly industrially developed nations like Great Britain, the United States and Canada. If the shorter workday had resulted in the physical and intellectual improvement of the worker and his family, then the gain would have offset the loss in production, but when there is no gain in that direction, but only loss to add to loss, it is becoming increasingly evident that the extreme short workday is a mistake economically, both for the nation and the individual.

What France Fears

May Be Unable to Demand Reparations If Armament Reduced

It is not so much the fear of invasion—at any rate of immediate invasion—which governs the French attitude; it is the fear that she may in the end be left powerless to extract the demand for just reparations which has been repeatedly endorsed by this country and, indeed, by the commonsense and equity of the world. Against such a contingency she is entitled to adequate guarantees; that is to say, to a relatively high ratio of land armaments. She can demand this logically on much the same sort of ground as we demand a high ratio of sea power. If any reasonable concession to her wishes in this matter can win her assent to a practical scheme of disarmament the concession ought to be made.—London Daily News.

Baron Byng Given Klondike Welcome

Governor-General Finds Dawson Citizens Out in Full Force.

A Klondike welcome awaited Lord and Lady Byng when they stepped ashore in Dawson from the steamer White Horse. The Governor-General and his party had come up the river to visit this outpost of Canadian life. He found its citizens awaiting him with cheers and hearty handshakes.

Returned soldiers turned out in force, drawn up in military formation. They presented His Excellency with the colors of the Second Yukon Motor Machine Gun Brigade. After a formal reception from the Yukon Order of Pioneers, the colors which were carried to France by the brigade were permanently deposited by Baron Byng in the Yukon exhibit hall, with the usual ceremony.

Germany's New Hate Hymns

France Justified in Her Fear of Another War

The parallelism between recent articles in the Berlin Deutsche Tageszeitung and the magazine published in America by George Sylvester Viereck is striking.

The theme is the same in both cases—namely, France, its character and its conduct. The Tageszeitung raises the question of whether a Frenchman more resembles a tiger or a gorilla. It reaches the amiable conclusion that he is a mixture of both. France, we are told, has a poisoned race soul and is addicted to the crucifixion of human beings. A Frenchman, it appears, is never so happy as when engaged in nailing a tortured fellow creature to a cross. As fierce as a tiger and as cunning and fiendish as a gorilla, the Frenchman is presented as a vile monster the gentle German is unhappily compelled to tolerate as a neighbor. The Tageszeitung appeals to the friends of Germany throughout the world, especially those in America, to spread knowledge concerning the true character of France.

Viereck does his utmost to comply. He begins by saying that "France is the Cain among nations." "Her International manners," he declares, "are those of a pig, a pig clad to the snout in shining armor." Further we learn: "The French may be human beings. Rational beings they are not." And so on and on. Viereck hymns a hate more passionate than that of Lissauer.

Formerly it was the Briton who was to be cursed with every breath. Now there are oily smiles for John Bull and much deprecatory scraping and blowing as he draws near. France has become the abominable one.

Germans, whether in the Fatherland or in other lands, doubtless deem their new propaganda subtle and convincing. If the amazing things about the amazing German mind nothing is more amazing than the German inability to understand how other folks think.

Yet for Germany so to spurt venom is not all a joke. It impedes world disarmament. It makes almost impossible further reduction of the French military establishment. It justifies French fear that Germany still has a will for war. In every way it postpones reconciliation. Yet, blind with rage, organs which pretend to express German opinion devote themselves to fanning German hate.—From the New York Tribune.

When America First Appeared on Map

New World Designated by Italian Artist in 1514.

"America" first appeared on the map of the world drawn by no less an artist than Leonardo da Vinci, and Major, the expert on the science of map drawing, explains the circumstances as follows:

"The first map known to exist with the new world delineated upon it is that drawn by Juan de la Cosa, the pilot of Columbus on his second voyage. This map is dated 1500. Juan de la Cosa was with Ojeda and Vespucci, and afterward with Ojeda on his last and ill-fated expedition.

"In May, 1507, just the year after the death of Columbus, a man named Martin Waldseemuller wrote a book to which was appended a Latin account of the four voyages of Vespucci. In this book, published at St. Die in Lorraine, Waldseemuller proposed that the name 'America' should be given to the new world, in honor of Vespucci, whom he erroneously supposed was the discoverer of the continent.

"In 1508 the first engraved map containing the new world appeared in an edition of Ptolemy, printed at Rome; but this does not bear the name 'America.' But in 1509 this name appears as if it were already accepted as a well-known denomination in an anonymous work, entitled 'Globus Mundi,' published at Strasburg.

"The map of the world of Leonardo da Vinci, presumably issued in 1514, has the name 'America' across the South American continent as well as the North—thus a Dutch author and an Italian artist contrived, possibly without malice, to rob Columbus of at least some of the fruits of his courage and perseverance."—Detroit News.

British Firms for Canada

The campaign of Canada's Trade and Commerce Department to attract British branch factories to the Dominion is now being brought to a close. The net results are that representatives of four important British firms are actually in Canada for the purpose of locating sites, while fifteen other companies have the matter under consideration. Of these latter nine or ten are expected to send men to look over the ground in the course of the next year.

Poison in Mushroom Cap

Animals usually know what is good for them and squirrels will consume the stalks of poisonous mushrooms without any apparent ill-effects. The cap of the plant is left. This suggests that the poison may be contained in the rejected portion, the escape of the feeding squirrels not being due to any special immunity. But the subject requires careful investigation.

French Deserter Was Foolhardy

Arrested on Swiss Frontier After Defying Police for Years

A wealthy Frenchman, F. Bertrand, described as a deserter, has been arrested at Geneva at a moment when he had practically one foot on either side of the Swiss and French frontier line, in a cafe that straddles the border. The cafe is in the village of Saint Julien on the international boundary. Part of the building is in Switzerland and part in France.

Early in the war Bertrand settled in Geneva where, his accusers aver, he made a large fortune trading with Germany. He bought a villa and several automobiles, and led a life of pleasure. He said he was more French than German, and took pleasure in speaking against France, particularly in the cafe at Saint Julien where, safe on Swiss territory in one of the drinking rooms, he could be overheard and even seen by the French police in the rooms on the French side.

There the French listened to his annoying talk but, unable to catch him on the French side, they could not arrest him. Bertrand boasted that—when there was no police about—he would enter France and return without a passport.

Bertrand, after dining well, crossed the border by going from the room on the Swiss side to greet some friends. At the instant he passed the line into France he was pounced upon by two French gendarmes. He put up a fight, but was quickly subdued, handcuffed and carried away.

Clothing the British Army

Nearly a Thousand Million Yards Used to Clothe Soldiers During the War

The clothing material ordered for the British army during the war was not far short of a thousand million yards, according to some figures that have now been published. It would be equal to about half a million miles, enough to go twenty times round the world.

Of this great total nearly 186 million yards of cotton fabrics for uniforms and other clothing suitable for eastern climates were bought, while 64 million yards of flannelette and 36 million yards of tent duck cotton were other items.

The army's greatcoats were responsible for 39 million yards of cloth and nearly 81 million yards of serge were required for jackets, trousers, puttees and so on; while more than 50 million yards of tartan were used for clothing our Scottish soldiers.

The heading miscellaneous cloth covers an item of 104 million yards; while for use in hospitals and for underclothing more than 276 million yards of flannel were required.

GUARD BABY'S HEALTH IN THE SUMMER

The summer months are the most dangerous to children. The complaints of that season, which are cholera infantum, colic, diarrhoea and dysentery, come on so quickly that often a little one is beyond aid before the mother realizes he is ill. The mother must be on her guard to prevent these troubles, or if they do come on suddenly to banish them. No other medicine is of such aid to mothers during hot weather as is Baby's Own Tablets. They regulate the stomach and bowels and are absolutely safe. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Mapping the Flin-Flon District

Oil Deposits in Large Area Will Be Investigated

The Geological Survey this year has a survey party, under the direction of Dr. F. J. Alcock, mapping in detail an area of about 50 square miles in Northwestern Manitoba, including the Mandy copper deposit and the Flin-Flon gold-bearing area around Elbow Lake. The known ore deposits in each area will be also carefully investigated. It is intended to provide good geological maps of the areas in which intensive prospecting is being carried on and to accompany the maps with reports indicating the character and mode of occurrence of the various types of ore deposits and the extent of their development.

Suffered So Her Hair Turned Gray

Husband of Winnipeg Woman Tells About Her Terrible Experience

"I never would have believed any medicine could bring about such a change as Tanlac has done in my wife," said Harry Gray, of 126 Bryce St., Winnipeg, Manitoba.

"For many years she suffered from stomach trouble and bilious attacks which, of late, were so violent that she had to go to bed for two or three days at a time. She got to be very thin and as weak as a child. She had such terrible headaches and suffered so dreadfully that though still a young woman, her hair turned gray.

"But the way Tanlac helped her is remarkable. She has gained fifteen pounds and is the picture of health. Tanlac is the finest medicine in the world."

Activity in Building

Recent Returns Indicate Heavy Increase Over Last Year

Building operations in Canada are showing large expansion this year, according to the reports received from fifty-six cities by the Federal Labor Department. The returns for the month of May just published, indicate an increase of 26.2 per cent. over April and 32.6 per cent. over May of last year. The value of building authorized in these fifty-six cities during May was $17,565,326, compared with $14,082,170 for April and $13,402,165 for May, 1921. The volume of building contemplated in all provinces except New Brunswick, Manitoba and British Columbia showed considerable gains during May. Quebec province reported an increase of 51.3 per cent. from $2,619,710 for April to $3,963,593 for May; while Saskatchewan topped the list in percentage gains by registering an increase of 316 per cent. from $308,955 for April to $1,281,431 for May. Of the larger centres, Montreal and Toronto registered increases in the value of permits issued as compared with both April, 1922, and May, 1921, Winnipeg and Vancouver showed declines from April, but gains over May of last year. Brandon, Moose Jaw, Regina, Saskatoon, Calgary and Edmonton reported considerable expansion over April and over May of last year.

Speed of Fingers Differs

The fingers of your right hand are quicker and more accurate than your left, says the Popular Science Monthly.

The ring finger on your left hand shows a burst of speed whenever it can vie with the forefingers of your right hand; and it slows down noticeably when it must team with the middle finger of your left hand.

Two fingers working together are faster than one going it alone. And a combination of two fingers on opposite hands is faster than two fingers on the same hand.

Practice, while it increases the speed of all fingers, tends to increase the rate of the slow ones more than the fast ones, thus overcoming the handicap of that one that lags naturally.

Britain's Military Strength

Reduction to Ninety Thousand Being Condemned by Press.

The proposal that Britain's army shall be reduced to a strength of ninety thousand of all ranks which is to be made when the mixed commission of the League of Nations presents its report to the Council of the League, in the near future, is being generally condemned by the British press, which thinks that the world-wide military commitments of Britain makes it necessary for her to have an army at least as large as that of pre-war days.

The army is already below what some conservative critics regard as the minimum, but the agreement is warmly supported by Lord Esher, who is the author largely responsible for the scheme. The Sunday Express had a long and somewhat bitter article denouncing Lord Esher as an amiable but industrious nuisance and it demands that he show his authority for juggling with the military strength of Britain.

DISTRESS IN THE THROAT CAUSED GREAT ANXIETY

Not an uncommon experience, was that of Mrs. H. S. Wilmot, of Shulee, N.S.: "Many remedies failed, still splendid results were found in 'Catarrhozone.' Buried Culture of the Past

Discover a Shrine Antedating the Cliff Dwellings

Discovery of a shrine and other unique ceremonial objects used in the mysterious rites of a people believed to be older than the ancient cliff-dwellers has been made by Dr. J. Walter Fewkes, chief of the bureau of American ethnology, in excavations near Far View House in the Mesa Verde National Park, Colorado, according to information received by the Smithsonian Institute at Washington.

These finds are the result of the field work just begun and are expected to be followed by others which may throw more light and add much to the knowledge of the culture which is buried in the past.

The most striking result of the digging is a shrine on a raised dais on the floor of a large ceremonial chamber. On the shrine idols, fetishes, prayer sticks, platter with corn, tobacco, etc., were found as well as twelve well preserved clay pipes unlike anything ever before found in these ruins. Two vases, one representing a duck, are also among the exceptional archaeological collections made. In a room barely five feet long beautifully decorated pottery radically different in ornamentation from that of the cliff dwellers was found and the indications are that this ruin belongs to an epoch older than that of the cliff dwellers.

England Has Funeral Tax

Merely Revival of Old Law Modified In 1750

Among the new taxes with which England is burdened there is one on funerals.

This is, however, merely the revival of a tax that existed as early as in 1695. At that time every burial involved a fee to the state of 32.

In 1750 this law was modified and the tax was based on the profession of the deceased.

To bury a workingman $1 had to be paid. The tariff exacted $5 for a "gentleman" or his wife, $25 for a doctor of law, $150 for a duke and $250 for a bishop.—New York Tribune.

Conference At Calgary Looks For Solution Of Unemployment Problem

Calgary.—Stating that so far as he was personally concerned, he was sympathetically disposed to help in aiding the solution of the unemployment problem, Hon. James Murdock, Federal Minister of Labor, addressed the municipal conference on unemployment.

"My position personally will be this, that whenever provincial or municipal governments think that they need help and ask the Federal Government to aid them in solving their problems of unemployment, I will see that prompt and equitable co-operation is forthcoming and the problem will be undertaken by my department," he declared.

Hon. Alex. Ross, Alberta Minister of Labor, stated the case from the standpoint of the Alberta Provincial Government, saying that the Provincial Government would be willing to co-operate with any reasonable demands, but certainly would not be imposed upon by any body.

Another speaker was Thomas Molloy, of Regina, Saskatchewan Government representative.

Just how this view differs from that of the prairie cities was evidenced in the statement of Alderman W. B. Simpson, of Winnipeg. Alderman Woodward, of Victoria, had declared that the returned men constituted from one-third to 50 per cent. of the unemployed men on the coast.

"In Winnipeg," said Alderman Simpson, "during the winter of 1920-21 returned men constituted 52 per cent. of our unemployed. But this has changed and last winter returned men were only 21 per cent. of our unemployed."

Alderman Woodward seized on this immediately. "The reason for that is," he declared, "that disabled men have been constantly drifting to the Pacific Coast."

Both Mrs Woodward and Alderman Haywood, of Victoria, repeatedly emphasized this point, that on account of the milder climate of the coast disabled ex-service men, particularly those suffering from partial paralysis and the like, were steadily going to the coast, there to become a charge upon the community because of failure of the Federal Government to provide suitably for them.

There were other interesting minor references to the shipping of men in from the coast to work in the harvest fields without reference to the fact that these men would later become a charge upon the prairie cities in the winter. This point was emphasized by Mayor Duggan, of Edmonton.

"The railways," he said, "ship in men for the harvest, and there appears to be no system whatever for choosing the right type of men who are physically suited for the work. As a result, the prairie cities are flooded with them after the harvest is over. I notice the railways already advertise excursion rates of ten dollars from Vancouver to Calgary and Edmonton. That means any man who can get hold of a ten dollar bill is tempted to the harvest fields which appear greener at a distance. The government should have a bureau to see that only suitable men are shipped in."

LIFTING OF EMBARGO WOULD BE BOON TO THE LIVESTOCK INDUSTRY

Toronto.—"The most important question in the Canadian farmer's mind today is 'when will the embargo be lifted?'" declared Hon. Duncan Marshall, ex-Minister of Agriculture for Alberta, when interviewed here.

"The Canadian livestock business will be put on its feet with the disappearance of the embargo," continued Mr. Marshall. "The great difficulty confronting the farmer in Canada is the uncertainty of his market. The opening of the English ports to our livestock to be fattened, and, what dealers term, primed, will mean that the cattle will be sold in much better quality than it is possible for United States to supply. And the British know good beef, added the ex-minister, smiling. They were not christened beef-eaters without reason, and will now supply an unlimited market for Canadian beef.

"No, I don't think the export of beef will materially raise the price of beef to the consumer of this country," replied Mr. Marshall, in answer to a question as to whether an increase in prices may be expected.

"The farmer in Winnipeg is getting but $5.75 and $6.00 per hundred pounds for his livestock," he pointed out, "while butchers' prices have never been higher."

"A cent or two per pound on livestock prices does not appear to materially affect the retail price," he said.

Appointing Officials For Operation Of The New Wheat Board

Ottawa.—James Stewart and F. W. Riddell, who were the chief executive officers on the Canada Wheat Board in 1919, have been asked to take the offices of chairman and vice-chairman on the new board which is being established under the legislation passed by the Dominion Parliament and by the Legislatures of Saskatchewan and Alberta.

The selection of Messrs. Stewart and Riddell was made by the Governments of Alberta and Saskatchewan, and the nomination was accepted by the Dominion Government. If these two men accept the task, their appointments will be made at once and they will be asked to come to Ottawa to make arrangements for the organization of the board.

The Dominion Government, it is said, feels that as the western provinces have the financial responsibility under the law, they should have the choice of the men to take charge. The appointment of the other officials will be postponed pending the receipt of an answer from Messrs. Stewart and Riddell, and their advice will be sought on that matter.

If these two find themselves unable to accept the task of managing the wheat board, it is understood that the Dominion Government will request Saskatchewan and Alberta to make other nominations.

The province of Manitoba has not yet taken action in regard to the wheat board, as the new government is not yet in the saddle. It is said here that provision will be made in the organization of the new board for the addition of directors to represent Manitoba, should that province desire to come in later.

Ottawa.—A hitch has developed in the appointments to the Wheat Board. The Dominion Government, which has been pursuing the course of inviting the western provinces interested in the matter to nominate whom they desire to compose the board, is now compelled to issue a second invitation, for Messrs. James Stewart and F. W. Riddell, who constituted the 1921 board, have notified the Government that they cannot act on this year's body. They expressed their gratitude for the confidence reposed in them, but added that they could not see their course clear to accept the positions. Mr. Stewart is on his way here from Winnipeg. The Provincial Governments of Alberta and Saskatchewan have been advised of this development and have been asked for new nominations.

Delegates from Thirty Countries Will Attend Canference

Ottawa.—Three representatives have been chosen by the Dominion Government to attend the international congress on the history of America which will be held in Rio de Janeiro next month. They are Dr. A. G. Doughty, Dominion archivist; G. Lanctot, of the Dominion archives and Professor O. D. Skelton, of Queen's University.

The conference, which is meeting on the centenary of the independence of Brazil, has as its main purpose the making of arrangements for the writing of a history of the continent of America, North and South. The conference is expected to be attended by delegates of upwards of 30 countries, including Great Britain, France, Holland and the United States.

Turkish Atrocities

Lloyd George Says War Prolonged Two Years by Action of Turks

London.—Prior to prorogation of the House of Commons for its summer recess, there was a discussion on the situation in the Near East, during the course of which the Government was urged to bring about an immediate settlement of the differences between Greece and Turkey.

Mr. Lloyd George, in reply to questions, said the Government had nothing to conceal in its policy, and desired above all that peace should be established in the Near East. Reviewing Great Britain's relations with Turkey, he said this country had fought one big war to preserve Turkey from extinction and had constantly intervened to protect her from attack.

"But," he continued, "in August, 1914, when we engaged in the struggle of life and death, when Turkey could have assisted France and Great Britain, she, without hesitation, as a result of conspiracy and intrigue entered into before the war with our greatest enemy, did us the greatest dis-service. I have no hesitation in saying that her action prolonged the war probably two years."

Mr. Lloyd George argued that the collapse of Russia was almost entirely due to Turkish action.

"It would never have happened," he declared, "if the Black Sea had been free. The same applies to the collapse of Rumania."

The Premier said it was a great mistake to suppose that the occupation of Smyrna and the proposals of the treaty of Sevres were entirely the work of Great Britain, as what was done was the work of the commission appointed by the great powers in Paris.

"The British Government," he said, "never interfered with that commission, which recommended that Smyrna and the adjoining territory be handed over to Greece."

Mr. Lloyd George said it was perfectly true that deplorable atrocities had been committed by Greeks, but the Allied Commission's inquiries had shown that the Turkish atrocities were greater and more ferocious. In the Pontus region, he said, tens of thousands of men, women and children were deported, and tens of thousands were dying. In view of such conditions, he said, he thought the Greeks were justified in demanding guarantees of protection before the Allied troops retired.

Mr. Lloyd George said the position now was that the Allies were defending Constantinople against the Greeks, who undoubtedly would occupy it forthwith if the Allies were not there.

France Would Make Rhineland Independent

Parliament Presents Scheme of Penalties to Premier Poincare

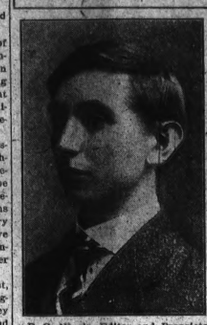

Paris.—Separation of the Rhineland from Germany, with its own parliament and government and a separate financial regime, supervised by the Allies, is a part of the scheme of penalties presented to Premier Poincare as representative of opinion of the French Parliament and which he is known to have taken under consideration.

The scheme which would be put into effect upon the definite refusal of the German Government to fulfill the agreement for payment of private debts owing to French citizens by Germany since before the war also involves expulsion of all the Prussian officials from the Rhineland, to be replaced by natives.

Other provisions include an extension in the power of the Allied Rhineland Commissoin and measures of economic pressure upon the principal German industries amenable to the action of the commission.

Bottomley Expelled From Parliament

Vote Taken After Reading Letter From Former Editor

London.—Horatio Bottomley, former editor of John Bull, has been expelled from the House of Commons by a vote of the members. After the speaker had read a long letter from him that he was neither guilty nor conscious of fraud, and stating that he had been made "the victim of appalling errors of justice," the vote was taken.

Bottomley's letter said he was unable to leave the hospital and expressed deep sorrow at having brought a slur on the House, which he loved. Continuing, he wrote that if the truth were known he thought the House, in its generosity, would grant him, not only its forgiveness, but its sympathy.

The reading of the letter was heard in dead silence.

Famous Racers Perish in Fire

Lightning Struck Stables at Connecticut Valley Stock Farm

Hatfield, Mass.—Three famous racing stallions were burned to death when the Connecticut Valley Stock Farm was struck by lightning and totally destroyed.

The stable was valued at $50,000 and, in addition to this, about $40,000 worth of race horses locked in were burned to death. It was impossible to check up on all the horses, as many of them ran wild after they had been liberated. Among those burned were Peter Vonnla, a 7-year-old stallion by Peter the Great, valued at $15,000; the Earl of Chatham and Nelson Todd. Both of the latter were valued at $5,000.

Winnipeg.—Announcement is made in an advertisement published here and signed by J. K. McInnis, of Regina, provisional president that the promoters of the Great West Bank of Canada have decided to wind up the affairs of the proposed bank and return money received from subscribers "less the reasonable expenses allowed by law." It is stated that sufficient capital was not subscribed to enable the promoters to secure from the treasury board the necessary certificate which would allow them to commence business.

Greeks Will Avoid Allied Troops

Athens.—According to the newspapers, the Government has instructed the commander-in-chief of the Greek army in Asia Minor and Thrace to avoid all contact with the Allied troops.

THE REAL MAKERS OF CANADA

C.C.A. Will Organize Section In East

Suggestion to Move Headquarters Was Not Given Support

Winnipeg.—The appointment of John Ward, associate editor of the Grain Growers' Guide, as acting secretary of the Canadian Council of Agriculture is announced. The resignation of Norman Lambert, who resigned to take up an executive position with a local milling firm, was accepted by the council.

It is learned that the suggestion brought to the sessions of the Council of Agriculture here by J. J. Morrison, Secretary of the United Farmers of Ontario, that the head office and the Secretary of Council be moved to Ottawa found no support from the western representation. The suggestion by Mr. Morrison that an eastern section of the council be formed was received favorably, it is stated, and it was left to Mr. Morrison to proceed with its organization from his own office.

The council decided to seek the co-operation of the Western Livestock Union in endeavoring to obtain regulation by the Federal Department of Trade and Commerce of the export cattle trade to the British market. The objective is the regulation of the flow of cattle and grading of their quality. It was felt that in view of the prospective lifting of the embargo it was important that some such action be taken.

Inventor of Telephone Dies

Premier King Sent Message of Sympathy to Mrs. Bell

Ottawa.—Right Honorable Mackenzie King, Premier of Canada, sent the following message to the widow of Dr. Alexandra Graham Bell, the noted inventor, who died at his home in Nova Scotia.

"Mrs. Alexandra Graham Bell:

"My colleagues in the Government join with me in expressing to you our sense of the world's loss in the death of your distinguished husband. It will ever be a source of pride to our country that the great invention with which his name is associated is a part of its history. On behalf of the citizens of Canada, may I extend to you an expression of our combined gratitude and sympathy."

(Signed) "W. L. Mackenzie King."

Amundsen Has Discharged Aviator Who Sailed With Him

Nome.—If Captain Roald Amundsen finds it necessary to postpone his trans-Polar flight, as foreshadowed in a message received here, he and Lieut. Oskar Omdal, who transferred from the exploration ship Maud to the schooner Holmes, will winter at Point Barrow, it is said here. Lieut. E. G. Fullerton, Canadian aviator, has been discharged from the services of Amundsen, which is taken here to confirm the report that Amundsen will not attempt before next summer to fly across the pole.

Canada's Forest Fires

Three Thousand Have Occurred This Years, Says Report

Ottawa.—Three thousand forest fires have already occurred in Canada this year, according to a pamphlet issued by the Canadian Forestry Association. British Columbia had about 1,400 of these fire and with Central Quebec has passed through the worst fire experience of many years. Airplanes and seaplanes are being used to great advantage in reducing this forest loss and have done excellent work in fighting the British Columbia and Quebec bush fires, transporting fire fighting pumps within one hour where travel by land and water formerly took 15 hours to two days.

Infantile Paralysis at Hamilton

Hamilton.—Drastic regulations have been decided on by the board of health to check the spread of infantile paralysis here. Three deaths have occurred and there is a rapid increase in the number of cases. The city playgrounds will close their gates indefinitely, it was said by the board. Closing of bathing beaches throughout the city is also being considered. The disease is contracted from discharges from the mouth and nose and can be easily contracted in water.

London.—The Government announced in the House of Commons that an agreement had been entered into with the United States Shipping Board for the settlement of certain outstanding claims with the British Ministry of Shipping by the payment to the United States Board of $12,000,000 including interest.

Fuel Board Making Plans To Secure Supplies Of Coal

Appoint Fuel Committee

Have Supervision Over Supply of Coal For Canada

Ottawa.—The Dominion Government has appointed a central advisory fuel committee to have general supervision over the supply of coal and other fuel throughout Canada. The committee consists of Hon. W. C. Kennedy, Minister of Railways; C. A. Magrath and Fred McCort, of Montreal.

Premier Drury, of Ontario, has been in conference with Premier King and Hon. Mr. Kennedy on the fuel situation. The Ontario Premier, it is understood, is arranging for co-operation between his Government and the central advisory fuel committee.

The function of this central committee is regarded in Government circles as being consultative and supervisory. It is desired by the Government that the initiative in the supply of coal and other fuel should be taken by the provinces and municipalities and that the situation should be dealt with as far as possible through the ordinary channels of trade. If advice or information is desired by any of these other bodies the federal committee will be ready to step in; but there is no wish to exercise any control or to supplant the ordinary methods of supply.

Agreement Is Reached

Railway Employees Accept Wage Cut Pending Further Discussion

Montreal.—Representatives of employees in the maintenance of way and bridge building departments of the Canadian railways, have reached an agreement with the Canadian railways, acting through the Railway Association of Canada, under which negotiations will be continued in regard to the reduction in rates of pay made effective July. 16, it was announced by the sub-committee of the Executive Board of the United Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees and Railway Shop Laborers. The railways affected include the Canadian National, Canadian Pacific, Grand Trunk and Temiskaming and Northern Ontario.

As a consequence of this understanding, the employees' representatives have withdrawn the application made to the Minister of Labor for the establishment of a board of conciliation and investigation.

The announcement states that the interim agreement under which wages have been reduced since July 16, fully protects the interests of the employees until such time as a definite agreement can be entered into.

Northcliffe Critically Ill

London.—Prayers for the recovery of Lord Northcliffe are being offered daily in the church at Barnet, at the request of Lord Northcliffe's mother, who lives near the little town in Hertfordshire.

The clergyman, in inviting the congregation to pray, said it was useless to disguise the fact that Lord Northcliffe was very dangerously ill.

French Children Visit England

London.—Two hundred boys and girls from the French devastated areas have arrived for a month's visit in England. They will be placed all over England and given a complete change and rest, with a reasonable amount of amusement.

Ottawa.—We are attending to it; that is all," was the reply made by Hon. W. C. Kennedy, Minister of Railways and Chairman of the Central Fuel Advisory Committee, when asked whether the Government had any further statement to make as to its policy regarding the fuel situation.

The committee was in session and steps were taken towards carrying out the desire of the Dominion Government to assist provinces and municipalities in securing supplies of coal through the regular channels. The conference was attended, it is understood, in addition to C. A. Magrath and Fred McCort, the other members, by M. M. Mahoney, Canadian Agent in Washington. Mr. Mahoney brought information in regard to developments at the United States capital and their bearing on the problem of importing Pennsylvania anthracite for Canadian domestic use.

It is the desire of the Dominion Government, as already intimated, that the initiative as to getting coal should be taken by the local authorities in each municipality, and that full use should be made of the ordinary channels of trade. The Central Fuel Advisory Committee will keep in close touch with all phases of the problem, and will be ready to advise and assist provinces and municipalities as the need may arise. The Central Fuel Committee is putting itself into touch with the various provincial governments and it is suggested that municipal authorities desiring assistance should put themselves in touch, in the first place, with the provincial administrations.

B.C. Salmon Pack Lowest In Years

Report Shows Decline in Catch in Every District

Victoria, B.C.—Although British Columbia still leads all the other provinces of Canada in fisheries production, the 1921 salmon pack was less than 50 per cent. of the average for the past ten years. The report of Hon. Wm. Sloan, Commissioner of Fisheries, for last year shows that the total pack in 1921 was 603,545 cases, as against 1,187,616 cases in 1920; 1,393,156 cases in 1919, and 1,626,768 cases in 1917. The catch in every district shows a decline.

China Wants Permanent Constitution

Pekin.—Parliament and President Li Yuan-Hung are in complete agreement over the adoption of a permanent constitution for China similar to that of the United States, the cabinet announced. The right of each province to maintain its own assembly is to be recognized. This, it is believed, will comply with the demands of the southern provinces for provincial autonomy.

Great Britain Will Pay War Debts To United States In Full

London.—The debate in the House of Commons on inter-Allied debts and German reparations which it had been expected would bring out further interesting facts respecting the recent note of the Earl of Balfour on the subject and Great Britain's future policy on the whole question of international relations, proved disappointing.

During the five hours of debate there was constant iteration of Great Britain's intention to repay her debt to the United States, but no pains were spared to make clearly apparent Great Britain's sacrifices in the war, her generous post-armistice attitude and her staggering burdens of taxation.

Sir Robert Horne, Chancellor of the Exchequer, said Great Britain had no intention of suggesting any alteration of her financial obligations to the United States, that the Government recognized to the full Great Britain's obligations to pay the debt "and we don't mean in any shape or form to evade that obligation."

Sir Robert pointed out that the British debt was greater than that of any other nation, amounting to £7,766,000,000, compared with, £5,147,000,000 for the United States and £6,340,000,000 for France. The British debt was £181 per head of the population, the French £162 and the United States £47, he showed, and in these circumstances it was impossible to make the British taxpayer alone shoulder the payment of the war debts.

"If only the nations which fought side by side in the war would be willing to regard their subscriptions to the war as contributions to the common success," he continued, "we might have been able to rid the world of many causes of irritation and plant in the heart of humanity a new and inspiring hope."

Mr. Asquith won mild approbation from one side of the House by declaring the Balfour note impolitic and inopportune, but said he hoped subsequent events would prove the contrary. Laughter greeted his statement that the United States knew Great Britain was dealing in paper figures when she emphasized the enormous expense of Europe's obligations.

Mr. Asquith expressed misgivings as to the wisdom of Lord Balfour's note and strongly advocated remitting the French and other Allied war debts to England as not only politic but good business. He expressed the opinion that the United States debt ought to be kept quite distinct from European matters and deprecated any question that the United States was under any obligation, moral or even sentimental, to waive its debts.
